Barney Frank Must Go

In a speech that was intended to arouse sympathy for homosexual men, who may become infected and/or might die from AIDS, Health and Human Services Secretary Kathleen Sebelius refused to use the word "homosexual." It seemed deliberate because the term is descriptive, and probably would cause you to picture a sexual act in your mind.

Homosexuals do more than attend gay bars where they can talk about fashion design and flower arrangements. Homosexuals do things that are unmentionable.

Still and all homosexuals demand that we accept them because they are a misunderstood and noble breed. Lady Gaga (or is it Lady GayGay?) just spent a week trying to convince Italians that gay is good. Not to be outdone, Public Broadcasting, on the recent anniversary of the AIDS discovery, has devoted a considerable amount of air time in an attempt to do the same thing.

The Liberal Establishment

Sebelius is part of the liberal establishment. Liberals do not think like the rest of us. They would like us to believe that we have no right to say that this or that is wrong, especially if it concerns the bedroom.

Of course none of these so called liberals would throw a coming out party if they found out that their own offspring was a homosexual, and none of them would want you to think that their spirited defense of homosexuality should ever be interpreted to mean that they themselves are gay.

Whatever you say and no matter how many hoops liberals jump through, homosexuality will always be thought of as unacceptable. Therefore I suggest the following - dump Barney Frank.

Today U.S. Rep. Anthony Weiner [D-NY] was forced to resign due to pressure placed on him by House Speaker Nancy Pelosi and company (who would never have asked for President Bill Clinton's resignation whose crimes and misdemeanors were far worse than Weiner's). Now if he must leave then so should Democrat U.S. Representative Barney Frank of Massachusetts. As the chairman of the House Financial Services Committee, he single-handedly bludgeoned mortgage lenders Freddie Mac and Fannie Mae, and his fanny, his male lover, was criticized for running a sex operation out of their home.

Barney Frank is a disgrace. Pelosi will not attack him because his way of life is acceptable to the woman from San Francisco who has turned her back on family values.

Fidel Castro

Sibelius delivered her speech in order to commemorate the first reported case of AIDS 30 years ago. She says that with the coming of the AIDS virus (which the Center for Disease Control has admitted began in the homosexual community), people grew fearful. Do you blame them?

Knowing that AIDS was a virus and not knowing much about this disease, people felt that they had the God-given right to distance themselves from the homosexual community. Sebelius is horrified to think that people didn't want to rent their properties to homosexuals. I'm not. I for one do not want them around children at the best of time.

The Secretary says that people who acted this way were "prejudiced." In other words heterosexuals who didn't know that the virus was not like whooping cough or tuberculosis (air-borne diseases) should be considered bigoted because they acted in self-defense.

Mark Twain said that the challenge for the writer is to find the right word.

Evidently while rummaging around in her limited vocabulary and looking for the one word that would paint a dark picture of anyone who believes that the homosexual community should be charged with negligence and a willful endangerment of society, President Barack Obama's dutiful lackey came up with the word "prejudiced." Apparently she knows that Americans fear that that label more than any other.

I do not. I know that a refusal to honor someone's sordid habits and lifestyle should not be thought of as prejudicial.

According to Sebelius if you want to protect yourself from the diseases that have accompanied homosexual behavior, which in the case of AIDS may have mutated inexplicably, then you must be intolerant.

It is as if we do not have the right to take the appropriate steps to prevent an epidemic. Liberals will resort to name-calling if we take steps to safeguard our lives from the effects of a community bent on a course of self-destruction, a community that wants their deviant sexual orientation to be accepted as appropriate and respectable.

Sibelius should look out into the Caribbean where a hero of the left rules over Cuba.

Castro took measures from the beginning and in doing so he brought AIDS in Cuba to a standstill. All with the AIDS virus were quarantined. And what happened? The contagion was for the most part arrested. Not so in the U.S.

"Cuba has the lowest incidence of AIDS in the region with just 3,200 reported cases in a country of 11 million people . . ." [Richard Stern]

I like what Mike Huckabee put into writing some time ago:

If the federal government is truly serious about doing something with the AIDS virus, we need to take steps that would isolate the carriers of this plague . . .

It is difficult to understand the public policy towards AIDS. It is the first time in the history of civilization in which the carriers of a genuine plague have not been isolated from the general population, and in which this deadly disease for which there is no cure is being treated as a civil rights issue instead of the true health crisis it represents.

Huckabee's words reveal that the homosexual community has a stranglehold on America and that this is not going to change as long as liberals like Obama and Sebelius are allowed to paint a dark picture of those who want nothing more than to protect themselves from what homosexuals can do to a society – medically, familially, and spiritually.

Ever yours,
